               i. B. Bañuelos: A lot of TV or radio has been done on other campuses ii. K. Hamilton: A lot of universities have this type of thing in the public relations side or even the Presidents office
            b. Are there other outlets like this where students could get involved in something like this, beside The Nautical in ASI?
               i. For a publication type of experiences, student could do like a zine or a magazine ii. CSUN moved to a platform between a magazine/brochure and tried to hand it out free to the student body, which was unsuccessful, resulting in them stopping production.
iii. With the digital age, many memories are captured in other platforms. There may not be the same infinity for a hard copy book in today’s world

iv. There is also publication classes on the academic affairs side

c. Are there any other archiving mechanisms on campus for retaining information on campus like this?

   i. CI View is archiving monthly and weekly (online and in print)

   ii. There is an archive in the library as well

   iii. Historically the yearbook was used as a form of archiving, but it has shifted over the years

d. Idea: Look at the libraries online journal system, as it is a multi-media platform and then we could have the ability to still archive the student experience there

e. The Nautical yearbook has pulled from the archives which Kevin Mapp and his team has taken over the years

f. Is there a requirement to replace the program or can we dissolve the program?

   i. Either is an option

   ii. It is written in the ASI Board bylaws so those would need to be changed depending on the outcome the Board decides on

      1. There is the question of what to do programmatically for the future and for the current budget for this year for the Board to consider
